With year four of the COVID era starting in just a few weeks, many experts are predicting that the up and down economic climate it created will result in a short recession this year.

Gov. Phil Murphy is among them.

According to the New Jersey Monitor, Murphy said during his remarks at the South Jersey Chamber of Commerce's annual luncheon that he's "in the camp of a shallow — real but meaningful — but a shallow, fairly short-lived recession" and that "part of the reason I believe that is there's an enormous amount of liquidity on the sidelines."

Rowan University's Glassboro campus offers a Federal Work Study (FWS) program partnership with off-campus non-profit employers - which is ideal for hiring interns. This program permits FWS eligible students to be paid by Rowan for their work with contracted non-profit agencies. It is our belief that a thriving and vibrant FWS program that actively engage industry partners will better prepare students for the jobs of the 21st century, put students on track to succeed in their chosen field, meet the labor demands of the local economy, and likely contribute to the upward mobility of students and their families.

"The Chamber is a great tool for expanding your reach and building valuable relationships. But like any other tool, it's how we use it that makes the difference. Be genuine and present when you approach others. Take more time learning about the needs of others rather than sharing yours. Relationships are far more valuable than "contacts" however, they take time and effort to build. Although we are members of the Chamber for the purpose of advancing our business, it is the personal connections that bring the greatest gratification and professional growth. "
