

4th Annual AEROTROPOLIS

Reaching resilience in airport-driven city expansion

20-21 March 2019 | Bangkok, Thailand

“Aerotropolis set to generate “economies of speed” and boost aviation-enabled trade in goods and services via improvements in airport area connectivity, people and product mobility, and land use”

- John Kasarda, CEO of Aerotropolis Business Concepts LLC

EVENT OVERVIEW

The swift evolution of Aerotropolis especially in modern Asia's landscape has inclined the fundamental concepts of airport cities. The race towards diversifying the direction of an airport-driven city that caters to the needs of the globalizing market will be the initial mark for economic sprawl. Airports in Asia are striving towards providing the best transition centralizing people and goods with greater capital flows. The extending growth of the Airport city is expected to reach as far as becoming the smart city of the future in a near decade.

The ever-changing dimension of economic model worldwide provide various platforms for aerotropolis to operate, hence, the constant increase of the market for airport city development. From 2014 to 2034, the new penetrating market will accumulate a market value reaching US$4.8 trillion, said John Kasarda, CEO of Aerotropolis Business Concepts LLC. Foreseeing the variances of airport cities economic demands will make clear of the ultimate functions of aerotropolis.

The next step of aerotropolis emphasizes the smart cities concept, providing the vision and urban innovation to improve civilisation overall. The 4th Annual Aerotropolis by Trueventus will stage discussions on the driving aspects, challenges, and the current trends on airport capital markets.
