Dr. Lynn Hunter has taught elementary school, coordinated curriculum, and networked with administrators, teachers, parents and students throughout the northeastern region of the country for over 25 years.

For more than 11 years, Lynn worked for The Board of Education in New York City. She worked as a teacher in grades K-6, an early childhood curriculum coordinator, and a writer and producer for WNYE-TV, their local television station.

In 1980 Lynn joined the business industry. She set-up and ran an East Coast Sales and Marketing office for a California-based telecommunications company—Account - A - Call.

Her career in educational publishing began in 1985, when she worked as the northeast consultant, training teachers, administrators and parents for Open Court Publishing Company. In 1988 she added sales and marketing to her list of responsibilities, and worked as a sales representative/consultant in New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

In 1990 she joined the sales force at KET (Kentucky Educational Television) providing resources for the adult education market in New York and New Jersey.

In 1995, Lynn moved into a managerial position, as the Northeast Sales Manager for Creative Publications. She was responsible for hiring, organizing and managing a team of sales representatives and consultants to sell and educate teachers, administrators and parents.

Currently Lynn is president of Educational Media Enterprises, Inc., a sales, marketing and consulting organization that provides support and services to teachers, administrators, parents and publishers.

Dr. Hunter is also the creator of the Dooples, educational characters and learning tools designed to motivate children ages 3 through 8. Lynn recognizes that parents are a child's first teacher. Therefore, as president of Doo Productions, a division of Educational Media Enterprises, she recently published the first Doople book in the series, "Meet the Dooples".

Lynn received her BA and MS from Brooklyn College. She earned her Doctorate in Education (Child and Youth Studies) from Nova Southeastern University. Her research on the use of non-traditional materials for 'at-risk' students is currently being published in ERIC. She is named in Who's Who since American Education 1996.
