EXHIBIT "B"

CRITICAL INCIDENT STRESS

INTRODUCTION

The implementation of this policy is in all actuality a two-fold method of dealing with Critical Incident Stress. One must not assume that all stressors can be handled simply by following the guidelines contained within. Union members must be trained on methods of recognition and the proper approach to treatments when faced with one who may be experiencing Critical Incident Stress Disorders.

CRITICAL INCIDENT STRESS PROCEDURES

WHEN SHOULD A CRITICAL INCIDENT STRESS DEBRIEFING TEAM BE CALLED?

- A. The death of or serious injury to a fellow officer in the line of duty;
- B. Any incident in which a fatality occurs because of an officer's actions, including but not limited to a motor vehicle accident or an officer (s) involvement in a shooting incident;
- C. A mass casualty incident;
- D. The sudden death of a child;
- E. The death of a victim after prolonged rescue efforts;
- F. An extreme high risk event;
- G. A high visibility event which draws considerable media or public attention;
- H. Any other event that occurs which produces significant and unusual stressors and the involved officer(s) displays symptoms of critical incident stress, either at the scene or at a later time, so long as the event occurred during the course of employment.

It is to be stressed that the physical, cognitive and emotional problems which may occur are normal reactions and they can affect almost any officer, no matter how much time he/she has on the job or what he or she has experienced previously.

If either of the first two incidents listed above occur, the union designee will ensure that one of the trained CISD Team members are called to respond to assist as soon as possible after the event, however any member of the department may of his/her own volition contact a CISD Team member with questions or CISD related problems.

The purpose of the CISD Team involvement at or in any incident will have nothing to do with fixing responsibility or blame upon any member and team members will refrain from any discussion involving such responsibility or blame. The involved officer(s) may, if he/she so desires, have a PBA representative present during any CISD discussions. All matters discussed with involved officers will be kept strictly confidential by personnel present. No notes or other records will be made of any CISD discussions and no reports or communications will be written. No discussions will be conducted with the administration of this department or any other agency regarding the incident or an officer's concerns and/or problems with it without the officer's specific permission. The only other time that confidentiality must be breached is when an involved officer expresses strong tendencies to injure himself/herself or others. However, before reporting these tendencies to the administration, the CISD Team member will discuss it with the department psychologist and abide by his/her decision as to the course of action to pursue.

UNION RESPONSIBILITIES

Although law enforcement officers involved in a shooting will be sequestered, those who have wounded or killed someone will have a Stress Unit Member remain with them until the incident investigators can conduct interviews. The union shall assign a union designee responsible for this task who shall provide aid and assistance as needed, but shall avoid discussion of the facts of the incident with personnel involved in the shooting.

ADMINISTRATIVE GUIDELINES FOR DEALING WITH OFFICERS INVOLVED IN ON DUTY SHOOTING SITUATIONS

The goal of these guidelines is to provide information on how to constructively support an officer(s) involved in a shooting and diminish emotional trauma by doing so. Extensive field experience has shown that following these guidelines reduces the probability of long lasting emotional problems resulting from a shooting. However, these guidelines are not meant to be a rigid protocol. It is important to apply these guidelines in a flexible manner that is appropriate to the situation.

- A. At the scene: Show concern!! Give mental and physical first aid.
- B. Psychological break: Get the officer away from the body and some distance from the scene. The officer can be with a supportive peer or supervisor and return to the scene only if necessary. This break should be of a non-stimulant nature with discretionary use of drinks and caffeine.
- C. Explain to the officer what will happen administratively during the next few hours and why, so that the officer does not take the investigation as a personal attack.
- D. If the weapon is taken as evidence, replace it immediately or when appropriate (with the officer being told that it will be replaced.) This guideline can be modified depending on how aggravated the circumstances are and how stressed the officer is (very depressed, agitated, suicidal, etc.)
- E. The officer should have some recovery time before detailed interviewing. The officer should be in a secured setting, insulated from the press and curious officers.
- F. Totally isolating the officer breeds feelings of resentment and alienation. The officer can be with a supportive friend or a peer who has been through a similar experience.

(To avoid legal complications, the situation should not be talked about prior to the preliminary investigation.) It is important to show concern and support to the officer during this time.

- G. If the officer is not injured, the officer or department should contact the family, i.e., phone call or personal contact and let them know what happened before rumors, information via scanners and phone calls get to the family. If the officer is injured, a department member the family knows should pick the family up and drive them to the hospital. Make sure the family has support, i.e., call friends, chaplains, etc.
- H. Personal concern and support for the shooter from a high ranking administrator (communicated in a face to face manner) goes a long way toward alleviating future emotional problems. The administrator does not have to comment on the situation or make any premature statements regarding legal or departmental resolutions, however can show concern and empathy for the officer who has just undergone a very stressful experience.
- I. The officer should be given administrative leave (not suspended with pay) to deal with the emotional impact (usually three days- more or less as the situation dictates.) Some officers prefer light duty to leave. Depending on the situation and officer's reaction, it may be best to avoid the double-binding situation of the officer going back to work and facing the possibility of another critical incident before the shooting is resolved by keeping the officer off the street until the shooting is resolved, i.e., after investigation, grand jury, coroner's inquest, County Prosecutor's statement.

All personnel at the scene (including dispatchers) should be screened carefully for their reactions and given leave or the rest of the shift off as necessary.

- J. The officer will attend a mandatory (to defuse stigma) confidential debriefing with a licensed mental health professional who is experienced with the law enforcement culture and trauma prior to returning to duty. There should be a debriefing as soon after the incident as practical. Return to duty and/or follow-up sessions should be determined by a mental health professional.

Everybody at the scene (including dispatchers) should have a debriefing with the mental health professional (which can be done in a group) within seventy-two (72) hours. The officer(s) who did the shooting may or may not want to be included in the group debriefing, as actually doing the shooting creates different emotional issues. Follow-up sessions for other personnel involved in the shooting may be appropriate.

- K. Opportunity for family counseling (spouse, children, significant others) should be made available.
- L. If the involved officer's phone number is published, it may be advisable to have a friend or telephone answering machine screen phone calls, as sometimes threats to the officer and family may occur.

- M. An administrator should advise the rest of the department (or the supervisor advise the rest of the team) what happened so the officer does not get bombarded with questions and rumors are held in check. Screen for "vicarious thrill seekers."
- N. Expedite the completion of administrative and criminal investigations and advisement of the outcome to the officer.
- O. Consider the officer's interests in the media releases.
- P. The option of talking to peers who have had a similar experience can be quite helpful to all personnel at the scene. Peer counselors are an asset in conducting group debriefings (in conjunction with a mental health professional) and in providing follow-up support.
- Q. Allow a paced return to duty, i.e., the officer can ride around with another officer, work a different beat or shift, etc.

PREVENTION: Train all officers in critical incident reactions and what to expect personally, departmentally and legally.

The purpose of the CISD Team and the major concern of this department in providing its services are to assist officers who may have difficulty in coping with what they have experienced at certain highly traumatic events and to provide support and education about critical incident stress.
