Instructions

The cursory ultrasound exam is a brief ultrasound scan used to detect the presence of fluid and other conditions as a screening test in order to better direct urgent patient care. This scan allows for indirect assessment for evidence of injury or disease as well as for sampling of fluids. This cursory exam is not intended to replace a complete diagnostic ultrasound exam.

Rimadyl

Your pet has been prescribed Rimadyl, a non-steroidal anti-inflammatory medication. Rarely, Rimadyl causes vomiting, diarrhea, blood in the stool or dark tar-like stool. If you notice these signs, please stop this medication and call us. Consult with a veterinarian before giving any other pain medication. Medications such as aspirin or steroids (prednisone) should not be given while your pet is on Rimadyl as serious side effects can result.
